Districts take decisions in meetings of the baptised members. Wilson's "biophilia" theory, which suggests that we evolved to find places like lakes and prairies attractive simply because they provided our ancestors with food and safety. The ideas that made Darwin's theory so revolutionary are precisely the ones that repel much of religious America, for they imply that, far from having a divinely scripted role in the drama of life, our species is the accidental and contingent result of a purely natural process.

Andgiven the substance of these respective worldviews, this is no surprise. Nevertheless some meaningful things can be drawn out:.
